Article Submission Guidelines for TechieWorld

Thank you for your interest in submitting an article to TechieWorld

Please thoroughly read and follow the article and graphics guidelines before submitting an article for publication.

Article Guidelines

- Articles should be provided in Microsoft Word files (.doc or .docx). Do not use any fancy formatting, styles, or desktop publishing to produce your article. Do not send articles in PDF format.
- Do not send drafts.
- Newsletter stories are written in the third person (he, she, they, it) and are at least 300 words and no longer than 500 words.
- TechieWorld is not a journal. Do not send papers. Instead, send articles written in a lively and engaging manner. Do not use figure references. Do not use footnotes. If a source should be referenced, do so in the body of the article parenthetically and if needed, in quotations.

Graphics Guidelines

Engaging articles need artwork. Send at least two, high-quality not blurry graphics with each article. These graphics can include screenshots, photographs, diagrams, and other visuals that can help tell the story.

- You must either own or have permission (in writing, which you include with the submission) for each graphic submitted.
- Send original screenshots and other graphics saved with little or no compression in TIF, BMP, PNG, or JPEG format.
- Provide a caption of each graphic in a Microsoft Word document (.doc or .docx) correlating the graphic file name with the caption.

Article Submission Checklist

Please review this checklist before submitting your article:

- Include the name, title, and affiliation of all authors.
- Do not quote yourself in the article.
- Include at least two, high-quality not blurry graphics to illustrate the article and write a caption for each graphic.

When your review is complete, please submit the article and graphics to
